Dear Sir or Madam:

I am writing to inquire about funding for research that will follow up a study comparing reactive and non-reactive measures of smoking cessation that was conducted by my colleagues and me at the University of New Mexico and was reported in Addictive Behaviors, Vol. 9, pp. 295-298, 1984.

In that study we investigated the validity of self report as a measure of success for smoking cessation programs. The initial results using a sample population from the University cessation program have indicated that self report is a reliable tool in measuring the success of these programs.

Expansion of that study, using a more diverse population with a greater number of participants, will provide for a greater understanding of the use of self report in the validation of many health-related programs. We are seeking a grant to allow us to continue this work and would appreciate knowing if your agency is interested in funding this type of research. If your agency is an appropriate funding source, please send relevant information and application materials.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Janet D'zinno
